When the Canal du Nord had been passed the enemy came out of deep dugouts behind us. In the face of terrific machine-gun fire he coolly led his men, surrounded the guns, and killed about fifteen of the enemy. Then he re-organized his platoon and carried on the attack forward. On the first of October he again did excellently.

On the night of the 5th, when his platoon was proceeding to the assembly area, Pte. WADSWORTH was acting as stretcher bearer. The platoon came under some very heavy shell fire, scattering them and leaving several wounded. This man, with utter disregard of his own safety, went about dressing the wounded, some of whom were in a critical condition. His prompt attention and skilful appliance of the bandages undoubtedly saved lives and his calm, fearless, behaviour was a wonderful example to his comrades.

Military Medal, London Gazette, No. 30573, 13-3-18.

Deed of Action

Military Medal—For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty during operations of Nov. 6th and 7th at PASSCHENDAELE. On the morning of Nov. 6th, Sgt. WARD'S platoon was ordered to move forward to reinforce the 1st Btn. An extremely heavy barrage was being laid down by the enemy, and the nature of the ground was also very unfavorable to a well ordered advance. Several casualties occurred shortly after the advance commenced, and the whole platoon was in danger of straggling and getting out of control. In the rear section some men became exhausted and took refuge in an old trench where they would undoubtedly have become detached had not Sgt. WARD returned and led them forward. During the whole period of the advance this N. C. O. continued to encourage the men by his coolness, and by constantly exhorting them and keeping them in hand. Later on, while digging in under a very heavy shell-fire, Sgt. WARD continued to inspire his men by moving among them with an utter disregard of his own personal safety, and by getting them under cover, with the utmost possible speed. Until the platoon was relieved on the night of the 7th, this N. C. O. was untiring in his efforts to keep his men cheerful and their excellent morale throughout the whole operation was in great measure due to his splendid example.

Military Cross—On the 30th August, 1918, in the counter attack on Upton Wood, he led his platoon with great gallantry and skill in the face of heavy fire, and covered the advance of another company with such good effect that they reached their objective without casualties. He routed 150 of the enemy from their trenches with heavy losses, and subsequently beat off a determined counter attack. His energy and devotion to duty inspired all his men with great confidence.

Military Medal—For conspicuous bravery in the operations at PASSCHENDAELE on the 6th and 7th of November, 1917. This N. C. O. was platoon sergeant of one of the platoons which went forward to support the attacking troops in front of PASSCHENDAELE. The barrage through which he was forced to lead his men was most intense, yet by cool study of the shell bursts he picked out the weakest point in the barrage, hastily led his men through with such success that only three or four casualties were sustained. Later, on two occasions when his position was being heavily shelled, he left his cover to dig out and dress his men in the absence of his stretcher bearers.
